What's New About the New South?

To the Editors:

Faulkner was speaking for Southerners when he said, "The past is not dead; it isn't even past." Having recently moved North after a life spent mostly in the South, I find Northerners wondering why Southerners talk as if the past were real. I tell them that in the South, we have been busy for a long time trying to sort out the past worth keeping from the past worth getting rid of. It's a job that connects us with most of the world's people today—the vital business of achieving a particular identity in a plural world.

For my own part, I hope Southerners (white and black) don't forget the suffering, the defeat, the injustice of Southern history, or the courage it took to endure and throw some of it off. We Americans can use that remembering. It might remedy our rootlessness, our disdain for limits. And it might free us for change.

I have always wondered if a Southerner put up that famous sign over the Western bar: "I ain't what I oughta be; I ain't what I'm gonna be; but I ain't what I was."

*Donald W. Shriver Jr., President
Union Theological Seminary
New York City*

It was the mid-'50s, and my home town, Clinton, Tenn., had just become integrated. Many of the scenes of those days will never leave my memory. At the courthouse, endless speeches inflamed the night air. On the outskirts of town lighted crosses sat overlooking the city as white knights danced beneath them. On my 15th birthday a series of bombs erupted inside our school, and for two years I was among 1,000 high school students who rode 13 miles a day to a lent-out grammar school, where the commodores were the right height for second-graders.

Recently my wife and I went to Montgomery, Ala., to pick up our first child, an adopted daughter. As we got in the car to leave, I whispered to her, "Melinda, thank heavens you never knew, you never knew."

*Dan Kenneth Phillips
Jacksonville, Ala.*

Love and Hate

I was born and raised in Clinton, N.C., the son of two professionals who happen to be black. I lived in New Jersey for 13 years. I regret my return to the Sunbelt.

The first major shock was the disproportionate number of young blacks with college degrees who were unemployed and turning to alcohol and drugs. It was also obvious that the arrogance and greed of the white community remained largely unchanged. My wife, who happens to be white, was able to observe some of this firsthand. There was a prevailing hostility toward blacks, but what was most shocking was the automatic assumption by whites that all other whites shared this hostility. What has been harder for my wife to accept is the hostility of the black community toward her. I'm beginning to hate myself for loving this place as I do.

*Delford A. Jones
Clinton, N.C.*

Forever Proud

The new spirit of the American South is an outgrowth of the trauma experienced by the U.S. in the '60s and early '70s. Long the nation's moral whipping boy, the South gained its amnesty during a period of racial tension, assassination, war, urban unrest, youthful alienation and political misconduct that left no American unaffected.

Free to think of itself in a different light, the South has replaced self-righteous demagoguery with genuine pride. The South has always been proud of its ways despite, perhaps even because of, the derision it suffered for its shortcomings. But the new Southern pride is based on the steady progress the region has made toward overcoming its problems while retaining its special identity.

*Albert Oetgen
Savannah, Ga.*

Lost Our Character

Forty years ago, Columbia, S.C., was a sleepy little Southern town (pop. 40,000) with wide streets, a farmers' market, 12 o'clock whistles, midday dinner, and lots of blacks living in decaying little shacks who helped with the house, yard and children for shameful wages—but then nobody had much money in those days. You would not believe the transformation we have undergone: enclosed, air-conditioned malls every few blocks, high-rise apartments and complexes, condominiums, housing for the elderly, underprivileged, young and swingy, middle-aged and any category. No more slums and quaint neighborhoods. Blacks hold important jobs. They are heads of agencies, live in exclusive neighborhoods, get elected to judgeships and the legislature. To say that maids and yardmen are vanishing would be trite. About the only thing that has not changed is the weather—still beastly hot in summer and mild in winter.

We have entered the mainstream of America. We're already complaining about the traffic congestion, and it won't be long before we'll have smog and pollution to contend with. It's a good feeling not to be apologetic about being a Southerner, but it's not the same South. We've lost our character, but I guess that's the price of progress.

*Evelyn Baker Alton

A Computer and a Bible

The thing that I find most interesting about the New South is that it clings to traditional values. The New South is carrying a computer in one hand and the Bible in the other.

*Tarek Hamada
St. Louis*

In Los Angeles the only game in town seems to be talking about "getting your head together" and then never doing it. In New York it's fashionable to decry the physical deterioration of "landmark" buildings and then forget about them on the way to your air-conditioned office. But in Charleston, S.C., citizens' groups have restored entire blocks to antebellum splendor.

Southerners are working out a consensus between the dynamics of contemporary living and the values of traditional life.

*Edmund Guertin Jr.
Los Angeles*

Lust and Eden

The South is space, light, trees, the sun. The South is mediocrity, violence, boosterism, glorified ignorance. It is friendliness and a joy in simple pleasures—and simple ideas. It is row upon row

MONTCLAIR STATE COLLEGE
UPPER MONTCLAIR, NEW JERSEY

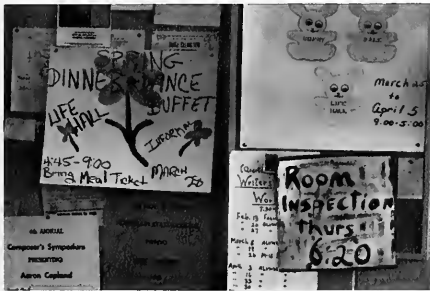

There is a job to be done and many willing hands to do it.

The nation's youth, life-blood of the country, become involved with world affairs, international, national, community, campus; each one doing his own part.

What was once but a dream is now a reality because people care enough to plan, replan, push forward until they reach their goal, perhaps a small one but ultimately a large one.

Where a friend is needed they befriend; where aid is needed they aid; where love is needed they love. Each one acts, campaigns, champions, conquers, questions, answers before enthusiasm and willingness have been spent.

First through exploring and then by developing to excellence, each person gathers help from others and through his own being contributes a part to the whole. Every one strives to fulfill his own ideal, keeping in mind the collective ideal of humanity, world peace and rest within the soul of every individual.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Countless memories of hard work and co-operation are found in the pictures and words of the 1968 La Campana. I extend sincere gratitude to those people who have made this experience valuable to me. Special thanks:

To Mr. James Pettegrove for his enthusiasm, support, and understanding.

To Mr. Ralph Smith for his time, knowledge, patience, and good humor.

To Delma Studios for their photographic work.

To Anita Garrity for her good sense of organization, her cheery smile, and endless labor.

To Dave Fogg for his feeling of the aesthetic and his ability to express "the handsome."

To Donna Irons for keeping communications lines open.

To Nikki, Dawn, Joyce, Bunny, Nancy, Bill, and Billy for their moral support and for being there.

R.S.
